

Treating Consumption Under Ideal Conditions

The Work of the East Anglian Sanatorium at Nayland

EAST ANGLIAN SANATORIUM
NAYLAND, ESSEX

to securing the maximum amount of sunshine, the rooms have large windows and just the right aspect. Steam heating is installed at low pressure, and the sanatorium has its own laundry and electric lighting plant. The extensive gardens are a great delight to patients, and convalescents are able to receive training in gardening, utility poultry farming and other outdoor occupations.

Social amenities obtain where advisable, and the Sanatorium has its own chapel and chaplain. Although attendance is not compulsory in the latter connection, it is interesting to note that the services are generally well attended and enjoyed.

Much could be written about the pioneering spirit displayed by the staff of this sanatorium who are doing such a splendid work amongst the consumptives, but there is not the space here. It is no wonder, however, that the name of the sanatorium is to-day significant of a noble endeavour to save the consumptive men, women and children which are, alas, all too many to-day.
